

DePaul University, Panhellenic Council
Code of Ethical Conduct

The Panhellenic Community of DePaul University has a mutual responsibility to uphold social, moral, and intellectual standards of excellence, and to inspire the discovery of each individual's full potential. The highest level of trust between all affiliated women and the chapters in Panhellenic is essential to ensure a spirit of cooperation and harmony.

It is our mission to prepare Greek women to assure roles of unselfish leadership through integrity and devotion by upholding and demonstrating the Panhellenic spirit in thought word and deed. In return, we receive the confidence to lead productive and self-fulfilling lives. We strive towards creating and maintaining friendly relationships among all collegiate women, Greek and non-Greek, while emphasizing the spirit of mutual respect, helpfulness, thoughtfulness, and loyalty. As we extend our strong Panhellenic spirit throughout our chapters and campus community, we also pledge to demonstrate our standards to members of the surrounding local DePaul community.

We also strive to protect the rights and privileges of individual persons and individual chapters through maturity and mutual respect of the celebration of individual worth to enhance diversity. The individual, in return, has a right to expect ethical conduct and unselfish support from all Panhellenic members, in order to attain stronger and more womanly characteristics.

As members of the DePaul University Panhellenic community, we accept this responsibility to uphold and honor the National Panhellenic Conference's Unanimous Agreements, the DePaul University Panhellenic Council recruitment regulations and constitution as well as the Code of Ethical Conduct, and shall stand by these stated ideals which guide our fraternity activities.
